Art Unit: 3735

1. Applicant's election without traverse of Group II, claims 30-40 in the reply filed on 08/09/07 is acknowledged.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claim 30, 35-36, 40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Feld et al (2004/0002626).

Feld et al discloses a device that is considered to be a "cardiac harness" that is made from any suitable elastic material including metal wires (paragraph 0195) that can be bent into any desired shape (paragraph 0213), since the device is made from any suitable elastic material and can be bent into any desired shape this is considered to be formed into a "spring member". Therefore Feld et al discloses the claimed method except for specifically teaching using a dielectric material to cover the wire, however it is well known to provide an insulating material to cover a wire when used in the body such as with the heart in order to protect the heart from any unwanted electric shocks when using metal wires and a dielectric is one of many known insulating materials that are used. Therefore a modification of Feld et al to include an insulating layer would have been obvious to one skilled in the art in order to protect the heart from any unwanted electric shocks from the wire and using specifically a dielectric would have been obvious since this is a well known insulating material. With respect to claims 36 and 40, it would have been an obvious expedient to one skilled in the art to apply the insulating material either before or after the spring members are formed.

4. Claims 31-34, 37-39 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

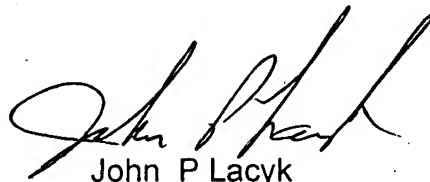

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Okuzumi (6,587,734) is cited to further show that the use of an insulating material used with wires in contact with the heart. Bingham et al (3,789,278) and Warburton et al (3,828,119) are cited to further show a dielectric material as a well known insulating material and silicone being a well known dielectric material.
